Jersey Jury Acts After Questioning Two Women Accusers Three Hours; · To Be Arraigned To-day

Artist Eager for Trial

Papers To Be Brought Here and His Immediate Extradition Is Expected

The Essex County Grand Jury in Newark last night returned two indictments, it was reported, against Alexander A. MacArthur, foster son of John R. MacArthur, of 177 East Seventy-eighth Street, arrested Saturday on charges preferred by Miss Mary Louise Bradshaw and Mrs. Helen D. O'Neil, of Cedar Grove, N. J. Each of the indictments, it was said, charged assault, battery and rape. Miss Bradshaw and Mrs. O'Neil were before the grand jury for three hours.

A certified copy of the indictments, it was said, was made out and turned over to Cautain Walter Codfrey. John R. MacArthur, of 177 East Sevover to Captain Walter Godfrey, of the prosecutor's staff of Essex County. He was instructed to appear in Tombs Court to-day when MacArthur is to be arraigned. The Newark authorities last night expressed the belief that as a result of the grand jury's action the New York authorities immediately would turn the prisoner over to them, and that MacArthur would be taken to Newark in the afternoon.

Yesterday afternoon MacArthur offered to waive immunity and extradition and face his accusers before the Essex Grand Jury.

By coincidence the offer was made to District Attorney Harrison, of Newark, at the very moment the two women were testifying before the grand jury. It was made by Emil E. Fuchs, of 51 Chambers Street, attorney for the wenty-eight-year-old artist-Actor. District Attorney Harrison rejected the effer on the ground that it would be appassible to accept it under the New ersey law.

Another Charge Made

Another woman resident of Cedar Frove, where the MacArthurs have a Grove, where the MacArthurs have a large summer home, alleges she was attacked by a young man three days ter the alleged attack upon Mrs. Pheil. This woman is Mrs. John H. Monroe, who lives on Love Lane, Cedar Prove. Her story was brought to this city by Deputy Marshal James Bogan, the came to Police Headquarters yesterday in company with County Detective James F. Mason with certified the of the complaints against Macrithur.

Mr. Fuchs, on his return from New-ik yesterday, said he had been re-ceived courteously by District Attorney Harrison, but the latter had informed him that under the New Jersey law it was impossible for the accused to ap-near before the Grand Jury and waive immunity.

"There was nothing left under the circumstances," said Mr. Fuchs, "but to go ahead with the ex parte evidence, and there is no doubt an indictment will be found. We have shown our good faith in the matter."

Just before he left for Newark Mr. Fuchs issued the following statement:
"I have had a long interview with my client, Alexander A. MacArthur, who I found to be a perfectly normal and far above the average young man in intelligence and character and am confident not only of his innocence, but that he can establish his innocence at the first opportunity given him; so much so that I have arranged for a conference this afternon with the District Attorney of Essex County, whom rict Attorney of Essex County, whom I shall inform that we shall stand on no technicalities and do away with all red tape to the end that he may by waiving immunity and extradition confront his accusers before the grand jury at its first meeting, where he hopes to establish, beyond a question of a doubt, his absolute innocence."

Ready to Show His Arm

Ready to Show His Arm

In connection with the latest charge made by Mrs. Monroe, Mr. Fuchs said:

"Some other woman has made a statement since Mr. MacArthur's arrest, that another assault had been committed in the same neighborhood and that the assailant could be positively identified by marks on his body. Mr. MacArthur is ready to have the District Attorney of this county or of Essex County have a physical examination of him made, as the best evidence that a grave mistake and injustice has been done him, this being one way of proving his absolute innocence."

According to the story brought from Cedar Grove the attack upon Mrs. Monroe occurred on Wednesday morning, October 13, when a man alleged to answer the description given by the other two women, broke into her home. Mrs. Monroe attempted to telephone for assistance, it was said, but the intruder made her stop. While she was struggling with her assailant her two dogs attacked the man and Mrs. Monloe fied to a neighbor. The dogs, according to the New Jersey detectives, bit the stranger on the left arm.

Derectives Barth and Gorell, who arrested MacArthur, said they had noticed a bandage about his left arm. When asked what the trouble was he is said to have replied he had a cut there, which was healing up.

While Mr. Fuchs was emphatic in his conviction of the innocence of his client the Cedar Grove officials are equally positive that no mistake has been made. County Supervisor Lewis G. Bowden, chairman of the Township Committee of Cedar Grove, said yesterday there was abundant evidence to connect MacArthur with the attacks. He is an uncle of Miss Bradshaw.

Summer Home in Jersey

At Cedar Grove it was said that the maults.

Mrs. C. Snowden Redfield, of Hill-crest Terrace, Glen Ridge, N. J., a distant relative of MacArthur, to whose-home the latter said he had gone after the family left for New York, said yesterday that MacAruthur had been there in the latter part of September. She refused to discuss the case beyond saying: "It is too serious a matter to talk about. Alexander always seemed to us to be a very nice young man."

The complaint brought to Police Headquarters yesterday by Detective Mason alleges that MacArthur assaulted Mary Louise Bradshaw, nineteen years old, a Montelair Normal School student, and Mrs. Helen D. O'Neil, fifty years old, of Cedar Grove, Detective Mason was surprised to learn that MacArthur had been released in $25,000 bail. He said he expected to return to-day with an indictment against MacArthur.

Rescuer Has Hard Battle | Seek Mystery In Saving Drowning Boy

Albert B. Vinch, three years old, of 534 East Eighty-third Street, while playing with other children in East Eighty-fourth Street yesterday, fell into the East River. Attack Charge shouts of his playmates were heard by Carmine Maritte, thirty-four years old, of 326 East 117th Street. He dived after the youngster, but was unable to make his way back through an off-shore current. He retained his hold on the boy while children ran for help.

John Burns, of 317 West Fliftieth Street, and Patrick Murray, of 92 East End Avonue, were working on the dock. They obtained a lifebuoy and a rope. In his excitement, one of the rescuers threw the preserver to Maritte without tying the rope to it. Then by fastening a weight to the line they succeeded in heaving it to Maritte.

Swimmer and lad were hauled ashore and taken by tug to the Metropolitan Hospital. Both were suffering from submersion, but will recover.

Special Dispatch to The Tribune
BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Dec. 5.—Developments in the investigation being made into the death of Dr. Elizabeth L. Radom, of Bostwick Avenué, to-day strengthened the theory that the woman did not take her own life, as was at first believed.

The police are conducting a search for the automobile in which the woman is reported to have driven to the Ash Creek gasoline station the night-before the body was found on the Baach troad, near Fairfield. She was said to have motored to the People's Investment Company, 62 West Thirtieth Street, New York City. was no sound. It was so still that the rustle of a single dry leaf would have seemed a loud noise. Blacker spots appeared among the Black Shadows, Honker the Goose and his flock slept a little way from the shore where no enemy could reach them. They were very tired, for they had flown many, many miles the day before. They needed to rest, for they still had hundreds of miles to fly to reach the place in the Sunny South where they would spend the winter.

Could you have been there you would never have guessed that there were any living things about save the trees, for it is doubtful if you would have seen them there were other eyes that could and did, for things were not at all as they seemed. At different places along the shore, eager, hungry eyes were fixed on those big sleeping birds—the eyes of Yowier the Bob Cat and of Old Ian Coyote and of Reddy and Mrs. box and of old Granny Fox. And back a little way was big Buster Bear listening instead of watching.

And there was another who was watching and listening, only this one was out in the water. It was Paddy the Beaver. And Paddy knew that peaceful as that scene seemed dreadful things might happen there, for his nose had told him where each of those hungry watchers was. So Paddy was keeping watch, for he did not dare go ashore to work as he wanted to.

"I suppose I could waken those Geese and warn them," hought Paddy. "But if I waken them they probably will worry and lose sleep and I guess they need all the sleep they can get. As long as they keep away from the shore they will be safe enough. I'll just keep watch. It will be time enough to give them warning when there is any real danger." Paddy stail came down the water is any real danger. Paddy crept up on the roof of his house and sat there in the black on the water with a name in the proposed in the water is any real danger." So Paddy crept up on the roof of his house and sat there in the blackest of Black Shadows. He could see the sleeping Geese, for they were very near Paddy's house, and he could just make out the shore. For a long, long time Paddy sat there without moving. But all the time he was using his ears and his nose as well as his eyes. His eyes told him nothing, for no one excepting the Geese was to be seen. His cars told him nething, for there was not so much as the rustle of a leaf. But now and then his nose caught just the Jean Cunningham Released Jean Cunningham, twenty-three years old, former sweetheart and accomplice of Elwood C. Adams, now serving a term in Sing Sing for burglary, was placed on a year's probation by Judge Alfred J. Talley in General Sessions yestarday.

Alfred J. Talley in General Sessions yesterday.

Miss Cunningham, who appeared in court with the baby in her arms which was born while she was in prison, was charged with having robbed places where she was employed as a maid. At her trial it developed that she had stolen at the instigation of young Adams. Adams's mother, Mrs. Beatrice Adams, indicted on a charge of receiving stolen goods, will go to trial next week, when her former maid will be one of the witnesses.

It was said yesterday that a charitably inclined woman had offered to take the girl into her home.

ALL-WOOL BLANKETS

Best we know of at $10

They are made of Cape Colony wool, warp and weft, which means wool of superfine quality.

We have not seen any that could compare with them at the price in years-$10 each. Not only are they unsurpassed in warmth, but they are also an attractive bed-dressing, being made in plaid patterns as well as in solid colors. The weave is the old-fashioned homespun kind, which gives additional strength that makes for long service. Satin bindings match the shade of the blanket. Each blanket is woven 102 in. wide and then shrunk to 72.
